Good Herb

A glass jar sits, holding branches, on a gray table. The jar is one that was once used for honey, and is half filled with water. The branches of a mint plant, with growing roots, sit in this water. Green leaves grow from the branches, which are bending to the right side of the frame. A single leaf sits on the table. The left half of the frame is brightly lit, and a clear shadow of the leaves stands against the white background.
